New Managing Director for IRIS Legal Solutions

Tony Bromfield appointed Managing Director of IRIS Legal Solutions

IRIS, the largest privately owned software and services business in the UK with market leading positions in a number of key sectors including accountancy practices, solicitors, barristers, not-for-profit and healthcare, has announced the appointment of Tony Bromfield as the Managing Director of its Legal business.

Tony brings to IRIS a broad combination of business development and operational experience from telecoms, professional services and technology industries. Tony started his career in product development and most recently was on the Board at Cable & Wireless International. Before that he was responsible for global operations at C&W Europe, Asia and US. During his time as an IT Partner with Ernst & Young in the 1990s, Tony was responsible for selling and delivering business transformation programmes in the technology, media and telecoms space.

Martin Leuw, IRIS CEO, said "Having established a market leadership position in the legal sector as a key part of our business strategy, the appointment of Tony Bromfield to head up our legal business marks the next phase in us investing in both the senior team and the resources to provide the profession with the tools it needs both now and in the future to drive efficiency and improve customer service in a rapidly changing world".

Tony commented "I'm delighted to be joining IRIS and was attracted by its track record of successfully building market leadership positions in its chosen sectors through a deep understanding of customer needs, a commitment to investment in its products and unrivalled customer service. During a period of market consolidation, IRIS is well placed to support the needs of the legal profession".
